MANAGER'S KORNER

December 2019

Tony Toscano

Fantastic time these holidays. Thanksgiving followed up by the Christmas and New Year season. Great to bring back memories of family now and family then. Some still with us in person and some in spirit, non the less still in our hearts. I was reminded of these memories when resident Jim O'Keefe told me he has a family gathering at Thanksgiving coming up with 31 family and friends. It reminded me of the 25+ family members we used to gather with at my parent's place for the holidays. 25 people, 30 conversations all going on at once and it seems like you know what each one was about and part of everyone. Answering people in all directions. Memories of my uncle Tony (the "Turk") as he was known on the Avenue. Not sure how he got the name, but he had a lot of friends that never had a job that all drove nice big black cars. He actually came by one day in a stretch Cadillac that had a huge horse and buggy hood ornament on it and the horn was the trumpet sound that starts a horse race. I don't think he ever came to one of our family holiday gatherings with the same girl. You know the kind, too much lipstick, too much rouge. One Christmas when I was about 8 yrs old, he took me to a giant toy store in Coney Island and told me to pick out anything I wanted. What a dream for an 8 yr old. When I was about 12, he made me hitch hike on the entrance to the Belt Parkway, a 6-lane highway, while he hid behind a bush. When a car stopped, he came out of nowhere, pushed me in the car and told the driver we were going to the Aqueduct racetrack. One of the true characters of the game, unfortunately he passed about 41 years ago. Yet he is still the topic of conversation at the holiday dinner table and a wonderful memory from my childhood.

Stories like this bring back fond memories of growing up in Brooklyn where, while delivering on my paper route I saw my first dead guy in the street after a mob hit (the "Turk" was not involved but had all the details) or on my first real job working in DiMola's luncheonette on Avenue X where I saw my 1st shootout. But those are stories for another day. Ahhhh! what memories. Hahaha

So, this holiday season I hope you take the time to remember what it was like growing up with family and friends and take the time to Thank all those with us and those who are not that have made our lives a bit more fun.

Golf cart speeding - traffic signals - lights on-

It has been brought to my attention more than once in the most recent month. Its not so much speeding but cutting corners without slowing down and not signaling to let the car behind you or coming at you know what you are doing. I hear the same story that no one has been in an accident so far. As I said before, do I have a volunteer to be the first? C'mon this is simple courtesy to offer those you share the road with. Key word "share".

Parking on the street Although there is no rule that does not allow you to park on the street, but again, simple courtesy. Parking on our streets is limited due to the narrowness of our roads as well as the number of driveways. Visibility at night for some of our elders is difficult enough without an obstacle course of cars parking on both sides of the roads not to mention the constant traffic during the day. There is plenty of overflow parking at the clubhouse both in front and behind. Please use it and leave our roads clear.

WORTH REPEATING

I don't want to sound like a broken record, but it gets tiring repeating what is homeowner responsibility. This is not a time share, or a condo complex, you own it. Correct, each owner has ownership (a share) in all 38 acres of Stonehedge. Each building, pool, garage, lawns are jointly owned. This means that if the clubhouse looks like crap it will lower the value of your home, I am sure you care about that. If the pool, shuffle courts, front entrance are not maintained it will lower the value of your home, again, I am sure you care about that. Same as if you home is full of mold, cluttered with dead flowerpots, gutters growing weeds or simply a touch up of paint on trim or driveways, you SHOULD care about that. I am sure your neighbor does, or you would if you were selling your home. Please address the issues before I must remind you. AGAIN. Thank you for your cooperation.

A TALE FROM THE SOUTH PACIFIC

We are a little over the halfway point of our 51-day cruise through some islands of the South Pacific. These islands are mostly a result of volcanic action, some of which is still ongoing; consequently, the high hillsides are very fertile and covered with dense vegetation. The highlight in Hawaii for us was the botanical gardens in Hilo on the island of Hawaii. The steep hillside down to the sea was covered with magnificent towering trees of a tropical rain forest with unimaginably beautiful flowers blooming in the undergrowth. 30,000 to 40,000 years ago, the population of the South Pacific Islands began, with many of the current native populations having arrived three to four thousand years ago. Migration from west to east came from present day Tanzania, Taiwan, New Zealand, and Australia to Papua, New Guinea and from there further eastward to the islands of Polynesia. Scientific evidence as well as the continuing traditional cultural practices today show us that all these islands have many commonalities; nevertheless, they still formed separate distinct tribes and had tribal warfare. Today they appear to live in harmony. Colonialism dominated the 1800's and early 1900's, resulting not only in the further development of the agricultural industries but also a great depletion of the native population due to European diseases. To build a labour force, people were brought in from China, Japan, and India. These peoples brought their culture with them and added to the local practices, particularly in cuisine and religion. Eventually it become not as profitable for the greedy foreign investors who moved operations to other parts of the world and now the islands are developing even more tourism to survive.

As of this date, our two favourite islands are very small, populated by native people who live off the land and the sea. They are poor in terms of our standards, but very rich in terms of happiness, love of the land, love of family, and reverence for ancestry and traditions. Both have schools. The people live in very basic shelters with limited conveniences. Power comes from solar panels and possibly generators fueled by some form of petrol. The fishing boats are small with 10 horsepower motors and are a part of daily life when the cruise ship is not there! The daily diet includes seafood, tropical fruits, and root vegetables. There are chickens, pigs, and dogs, as well as flies! Cooking is done over fires. Water is collected in huge rain barrels with piping coming off the metal roof. At both of these islands, we left school supplies. When a cruise ship is anchored offshore, the whole population turns out to welcome and entertain us. The fishing boats become a means for transporting cruise passengers around the island. The school children were along the shore singing for us. The adults were selling handcrafts.

Evidence is abundant that this part of the world gets support and funding from Australia, New Zealand, Japan, Korea, and Canada, some of it through the United Nations. American Samoa appears to receive the least amount of support, even from the US to which it belongs. It is valued for its deep harbour.

The port cities are just that, port cities. There is a hustle and bustle in the harbour and in the cities themselves. The markets are lively. Everywhere we have been, English is spoken, as well as the local language. In most places of business, the US dollar is accepted. Some smaller privately owned businesses do give a better price if purchasing is done in local currency.

So far, we have been to four Hawaiian islands, Fanning Island in the country of Kiribati, American Samoa and Samoa, and four stops in Fiji. Everywhere we go the people are friendly and very welcoming. The children are so cute and happy. The attitude to us as tourists is heartwarming; they appreciate our expressions of fondness for their islands; they accept our "No thank you" when asked to buy their products or services with a smile and a "Thank you". How refreshing!
